

BEFORE YOU DECIDE ANYTHING

Go Ahead. Look Us Up.

1 It is a brand you have never heard of.

You have never heard of this brand. It is not on a shelf at Target and you cannot buy it on Amazon. That is on purpose. There is no shelf space to pay for and no middleman taking a cut, so the money goes into what is actually in the bottle. It is also why they can hand you over $100 in free product across your first five months instead of spending it on advertising to you.

2 Trusting a company outside the Big Box is scary.

Handing your trust to a company you have never heard of, for the things your family touches every single day, is a big ask. You should be careful about that. So do not trust me. Try it. There is a 100% satisfaction guarantee and a 100% money back guarantee, and you do not even have to send the used product back. The only thing you are risking is finding out I was right.

3 I need to research this first.

Good. Research it. Go and look at what this company does when a natural disaster wipes out a community. When one hits, they put boots on the ground. The supply chain is domestic and there are people in almost every town, so the trucks move fast: generators, non-toxic cleaning supplies, wellness boxes, and thousands of pounds of Riverbend Ranch Beef, straight to families and to the first responders working the site. That record is public and it is not marketing. Please make sure to check out the comments from others in the social media posts.

See it for yourself.

AND THE PART EVERYBODY REALLY WANTS TO KNOW

Two carts. The same clean.

Both baskets do 96 loads, 100 sheets, 30 washes and 96 ounces of glass. Only the total changes.

4

It costs less. Here is the math.

A big jug looks cheap until you count what is in it. So this is not bottle against bottle. Both carts buy the same amount of clean, and the multiplier is printed on every line so you can check it.

It is not in the totals above because no big box brand publishes a dish count to compare it against.
